Heritage Park playground takes shape

The Huon Valley Council's work on the play area at Heritage Park in Geeveston is continuing.

The Danish SKYBRIDGE feature was installed by the contractors Ultimate Play, last week and the coming months will see more playground equipment going in.

Huon Valley Commissioner Adriana Taylor says a lot of hard work over the last couple of years is starting to see fruition.

"Council staff have been working on acquiring grants and designing the playground which is being developed as part of the Heritage Park Master Plan. It is very exciting to see their work start to take shape as the construction is underway.

"Now that the SKYBRIDGE is up, the next stages of the all-ages, all-ability playground will be installed. These include a 35 metre flying fox, an inclusive carousel (like the one at Shipwrights Point) sand diggers, a maze, monkey bars and a whirly gig.

"We've also begun work on the new toilet block for the park.

"All of these elements will come together to create a wonderful area for local children as well as visitors. The playground and the newly completed off-lead dog area have seen Heritage Park transformed.

"We expect to finish the current building over the next four months. We look forward to finishing the work at Heritage Park so the community can continue to enjoy all of its different features," Commissioner Taylor said.
